Please note: The day by day descriptions published in our brochure or on the website are intended as a guideline only. Adventure travel by nature is unpredictable and weather patterns, game migrations, road conditions, traveling times and a multitude of other factors associated with travel in Africa may necessitate itinerary changes that ultimately are for the client's benefit. An open and flexible approach, a willingness to participate in the day to day of the tour procedures and an awareness of the elements are essential in order to get the most out of your tour experience.

Drifters reserve the right to offer alternative accommodation / activity of a similar or higher standard at any stage during the tour should the advertised accommodation / activity not be available for any reason.

If you are at any time unhappy or unsatisfied with how your tour is going, please speak to your guide immediately and give him/her the opportunity to correct the problem. If you are unable to talk to your guide, or you feel that your guide is the problem, then please contact the Drifters management team immediately so that we can resolve the issue.

It is compulsory that all passengers have comprehensive and adequate travel insurance to financially safeguard against unforeseen circumstances, damages or loss.
